"It's uplifting to see that our Navajo people are making progress in fighting COVID-19, but we have to remember that there are several variants that continue to spread, the most recent being in the state of New York. We have to remain diligent and keep taking all precautions and informing our elders. Be safe and continue praying for the families that are grieving the loss of loved ones and those who are fighting the virus. We have to continue to stay home as much as possible, wear a mask or two, avoid large gatherings, practice social distancing, and wash your hands with soap and warm water often," said Navajo Nation President Jonathan Nez.

Health care facilities across the Navajo Nation continue to administer COVID-19 vaccines during drive-thru events or by appointment. If you would like to receive the vaccine, please contact your health care provider for more information for your Service Unit.

"We are very thankful to all of our Navajo people for helping to bring down the numbers of daily new cases of COVID-19, but there is still much to be done. So please stay focused and take all precautions to protect yourselves and your family members. We are in this fight against COVID-19 together and we all have to do our part to help," said Vice President Myron Lizer.
