The Season of Thanksgiving

Ahxe'é Hwinidzin Båhoo’aaah

Navajo Nation Office of the President & Vice President
Many of our Navajo citizens, families, and communities felt the mental, physical, and emotional impact of the COVID-19 pandemic for over a year. Despite this, many of our people persevered and showed compassion during these times of adversity by helping others and making sure friends, family, and others followed COVID-19 preventative guidelines. We are incredibly grateful to our Navajo people for being strong and resilient like our ancestors. May your Thanksgiving Day be filled with love, gratitude, and happiness!
