WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. — Navajo Nation President Jonathan Nez, Speaker Seth Damon, and Vice President Myron Lizer offer their condolences to the family of former Tohatchi Red Willow Farm Board President and beloved community leader Dorothy Bitsilly, who passed away on Wednesday at the age of 93.

Mrs. Bitsilly is Tábąąhá (Water’s Edge Clan), born for Tóódích’iini (Bitter Water Clan). Her maternal grandfather was Naakai dine’é (The Mexican Clan) and her paternal grandfather was Táchii’nii (Red Running into the Water People Clan). She is originally from Tohatchi, NM, and born on September 28, 1928.

“The loss of Dorothy Bitsilly deeply saddens our people and communities. We offer condolences to her family, friends, and colleagues. Throughout her lifetime, she lived by the teachings of our elders and demonstrated T’áá Hwó Ají Téego, self-reliance and self-determination, through her accomplishments and compassion for her community of Tohatchi and many of our people. Her work and dedication will undoubtedly live on for many generations. Dorothy’s unyielding advocacy for the Red Willow Farm project serves as an example of what it means to love and serve your community as a resilient Navajo woman. Her contributions will be missed and cherished,” said President Jonathan Nez.

In her years serving as a farm board president, Mrs. Bitsilly was known for her dedication to the Red Willow Farm project, which supplied a water well and electricity to local farmers. Her advocacy was largely driven by her dream to see the Navajo people achieve food sovereignty from agriculture.

She also served over 30 years as a Bureau of Indian Affairs education liaison, was the Vice President of the Fort Defiance Agency Council on Aging, and the Navajo Nation representative to the New Mexico Aging Advisory Policy group.
