“Our public health experts have given us the guidance and the resources to push back on COVID-19, including the wearing of face masks in public places and getting vaccinated and a booster shot. If you are experiencing symptoms such as a fever, sore throat, body aches, coughing, or others, please do your best to isolate yourself and get tested for COVID-19 as soon as possible. If you are sick, please do not go out into public. We are in this together and we must all do our part to keep ourselves safe and healthy,” said Navajo Nation President Jonathan Nez.

Health care facilities on the Navajo Nation continue to administer COVID-19 vaccines. If you would like to receive one of the COVID-19 vaccines, please contact your health care provider and schedule an appointment.

“We tend to let our guard down around family and friends, but we must remain mindful of the risks as we see COVID-19 cases increase in areas around the Navajo Nation. Please take precautions and continue to pray for your loved ones and all of our frontline workers who are fighting for us all,” said Vice President Myron Lizer.
